

Information and Call for Collaborative Research Partners for FY2025
With the Collaborative Research Network for Asian Children with Developmental Disorders
Under MEXT Policy Initiative

The Collaborative Research Network for Asian Children with Developmental Disorders is a unique initiative among national universities in Japan. It is an education research network set up by several national universities that have come together to promote mental health in children, with a scientific focus. This is a project initiative of the Japanese Government's Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology (MEXT). Participating universities and centers are Osaka University United Graduate School of Child Development, Osaka University, Kanazawa University, Hamamatsu University School of Medicine, Chiba University and University of Fukui ("UGSCD"), Molecular Research Center for Children's Mental Development, United Graduate School of Child Development, Osaka University, Research Center for Child Mental Development, Kanazawa University, Research Center for Child Mental Development, Hamamatsu University School of Medicine, Research Center for Child Mental Development, Chiba University, and Research Center for Child Mental Development, University of Fukui.

The project goes beyond the bounds of the five academic institutions named above. The Network is to play a key role as a hub for collaborative research aimed at promoting the mental health of children, with participation from other Japanese and non-Japanese institutions, international researchers and research centers around the globe. The Network aims to respond to the requests and needs of Japanese as well as international researchers.

To this end, the Network is calling for research partners who will work in collaborative research with the five universities that comprise UGSCD. The collaboration will utilize the resources and facilities that have been acquired and created at these centers and research support and funding will be made available. Potential research partners from far and wide are invited to apply to undertake collaborative research.
